

ABSTRACT

A speech recognition framework receives information about a recognized phrase from a speech engine. The framework identifies the application that is a focus of the recognized phrase. The framework then selects a handler function based on the recognized phrase and the application. The framework calls the handler function, which responds to the phrase.

20198902.doc